NEET Case Study

Chipping Campden School

Prospect Training Services (PTS) has been recognised as the number one training provider for individuals not in education, employment or training (NEET) in Gloucestershire. This is due to our European Social Funded (ESF) NEET contract, designed to support 15-24-year-olds at risk of leaving school or work. PTS has delivered many programmes under the ESF NEET contract in schools and training centres across Gloucestershire. One is Chipping Campden School, which we have supported for the past three years to support their students. James Slattery, The Head of Careers at the school, had the following to say about PTS, Tom Bee, our Sports Coach Programme Tutor, and our You Could Be programme, which is covered under the NEET contract:

“Tom has kept PTS’ reputation for high-quality staff very much intact. He is an excellent tutor and is completely at home in the classroom. He was very good at motivating the students and getting them to take part actively. I had very good feedback from all our own tutors who spoke to their respective students. Our group consisted of good honest students who wanted to do well despite the challenges, in some instances, which those on the Careers Workshop can encounter.

Walking into the room and seeing good quality work everywhere was a real source of pride. These are the people whom the Careers Workshop is built for. Those who may not have all the advantages but more than make up for it in terms of good attitude and determination. Great work across the board. I know all good times eventually come to a close, and the funding will stop, but we have greatly benefitted from PTS’s well-run business.”
